RSS ideologue M G Vaidya no more

MUMBAI, DHNS: Rashtriya Swyamsevak Sangh ideologue and its long-serving spokesperson Madhav Govind Vaidya passed away on Saturday.

M G Vaidya is one of those who have seen the RSS and several other Sangh Parivar outfits from its inception and witnessed the way the saffron organisation grew and transformed.

A teacher-turned-professional journalist, he also served as Editor of Tarun Bharat.

Popular known as MaGo Vaidya and Baburaoji, he passed away at the age of 97 in Nagpur, which is the headquarters of RSS.

He was recently recovered from a Covid-19 infection, however, his health deteriorated on Friday and was admitted to hospital. He passed away at Spandan Hospital in Nagpur.

The last rites would be held on Sunday.

He is survived by his wife Sunanda and eight children (three daughters and five sons), besides a large extended family.

Dr Manmohan Vaidya is RSS Saha Sarkaryavah or Joint General Secretary, who is third in the hierarchy, while Ram Vaidya is Pracharak in Vishwa Vibhag of the RSS and is based in Europe.
