Sindhi, Sanskrit, Dogri: The many tongues of 17th LS

India's linguistic and cultural diversity was on full display in the Lok Sabha on Monday, as newly elected members—some donning traditional attires— took oath in different languages.

The proceedings of the first session of the 17th Lok Sabha began with observance of silence to mark the solemn occasion.

Pro-tem Speaker Virendra Kumar then called Prime Minister Narendra Modi to take oath as member of the Lok Sabha followed by his Council of Ministers. Modi, Defence Minister Rajnath Singh, Home Minister Amit Shah, and most of the Union ministers preferred to take oath in Hindi. Chants of 'Modi, Modi' rent the air as the prime minister stepped forward to read out his oath and went about greeting members of the Lok Sabha.

Union Ministers D V Sadananda Gowda and Pralhad Joshi took the oath in Kannada, while Arvind Sawant, a Shiv Sena member from South Mumbai, chose his mother tongue Marathi for the occasion. Union Minister Suresh Angadi, a member from Belagavi, took oath in English.

Most of the Lok Sabha members from Karnataka took oath in Kannada, while Anant Kumar Hegde chose Sanskrit. Mysore-Kodagu MP Pratap Simha added a bit of colour to the proceedings by turning up in traditional Kodava attire, while Bangalore South member Tejasvi Surya was dressed in a silk dhoti, white shirt and a saffron scarf.
